

German police. They wanted to see our passports. Again. I was thinking about killing these police officers. I realized, that I was thinking somehow much about killing people that night. I just really wanted to sleep. But I didn't.

After the second police visit, I fell asleep once more (lucky). But it wasn't long again, cause after maybe one, two hours we arrived to Nrnberg.

Next hours were endless. Only waiting at the train station for a bus to Wrzburg. It wouldn't be so bad, if it won't take three hours! From three to six am.

Tyna and Vojta (the two strangers, I found out their names during the way) wanted me not to sleep, but I was really, really tired. They were worry about fun, cause everybody was falling asleep.

Some noise woke me up I opened my eyes and in front of us were going two policemen with a big black dog. I thought that this night can't be even crazier. Fortunately I was right. I fell asleep for the last time. At six o'clock we were in a train and at about half past seven in Wrzburg.

First day in Wrzburg

After a quick familiarization with my exchange partner and her father, we went a little car sightseeing though Wrzburg. They showed me the Wrzburg Residence, river Main, Marienberg Fortress and other interesting monuments. The last "monument" was a bakery, where we bought some pastries and then hooray home.

At home I met all Emma's (my exchange partner) sisters and her mum. Everybody of her family was so nice and friendly. She had three sisters: Lara 16, Dana 13 and Fina 10.

We had breakfast, but then we didn't know what to do. So Emma showed me the house, garden and then by bikes the village (because she didn't live in Wrzburg, but in Fuchsstadt).

We didn't know what to do else, so we helped with doing lunch. Pumpkin pizza with a tomato salad? Why not. Surprisingly it was delicious.

Followed waveboarding was quite awkward, but I fell down only thousand times, so who cares.

At three o'clock Kika and her exchange Franziska came and maybe one hour later came Helena and her exchange Paul. We wanted to watch some film, but had no idea which. Finally we decided for a film named "Given". We watched it English without subtitles (it was so difficult to tune it). It was... an interesting film. I can't say amazing, I don't want to lie. But it was good.

In the evening Paul, Franzicka, Helena and Kika left, I ate my schnitzel, Emma's salad, had a shower and then go to bed at about eight clock. I really, really needed some hours of sleeping.

German lessons and muffins

Monday. It was a quite shock for me to find out that I have to get at ten to six and we have to leave house at ten to seven. In Czech I get up at six forty-five! But OK, I mastered it somehow. In some minutes, we were sitting in a bus (Emma, Lara, Dana, Fina and I) and listening to music from our headphones. We had to change bus once, but after a while I was in the grammar school.

We found the class easily and just waited for a school bell. The first lesson was only talking about the seminar, what should we do, what will we do and some stuff like this... Everybody had to say something about himself (I play the guitar e. g.). Other lessons were with our exchange partners with their classes. Emma (and so I) had German, I. T., Biology, Maths
