

bowling groups. It was crazy, our group was good. In the end I was with Niklas, Daniel, Eleanor and Franziska. It was a good game. We played twice and I always ended third. It's good, I think.

It was quite chaotic, when we arrived back to Würzburg. Nobody could find Týna's exchange partner, Antonia. We were finding her for five minutes, we were back in the train – everywhere. Then one teacher found her at the other side of the station. We didn't understand what happened, but... OK, everybody's alive, we can go.

Emma had a dance class with Paul in the evening, so I and Helena went to Franziska's (and Kika's). We played some games, cards, magic... It was fun. After maybe three hours, we picked up Emma and went home.

Nuremberg and Kateřina

Finally Saturday. I was glad, but sad too, because the seminar was going to end. Emma's father took us to the station and we went to Nuremberg by train. I was sitting with Týna and Vojta. It was good to hear Czech again, to have a rest of English and German...

In Nuremberg we had a guide. She was talking about the First World War. She showed us the Colosseum, Nazi party rally grounds... Hitler's things. It was... unbelievable. Shocking, frightening.

After that we had a free time. We had a pizza with Emma and then go to Zara a Mango (she wanted a scarf, but didn't buy it) and then to Starbucks. Caramel hot chocolate... the best thing I've ever had. Then we had meeting (all ISS) and went to Imperial Castle of Nuremberg with Mr. Mars as a guide.

I and Emma were with the English boys. They were funny and friendly, but they couldn't say my name. They were trying, but unsuccessfully. It was quite sad, because they were trying all the time and it still wasn't good.

After a few minutes (castle officers had said we couldn't be there) we were going to the train station.

When we were going back home, I was sitting with the English boys, but Emma was who knows where. We were talking about music (Nathan liked the same music like I do) and my name. They tried again and again. I was so sorry about them, they couldn't say ř. But maybe once, twice they did! Congratulations!

Climbing and the last evening in Würzburg

Emma said, that Sunday morning is only about sleeping. So she slept. Till ten. I had breakfast and then watched two episodes of Gossip girl with Emma. The best morning.

Lunch was amazing: beef roll with broccoli, beetroot and homemade pasta. Her mother was amazing in cooking.

Journey to the climbing center was a little complicated. Emma's mother took us to Franziska's, Franziska's mother took us to Paul's and Paul's mother took all of us to the center. I didn't understand it.

We had to undergo a lecture about safe climbing, then we could go. I went with the English boys, it's unnecessary to say it was completely funny.

Then I went to higher barriers with Emma (they were so afraid).

When we were on the ground again, Franziska's mother took us home. It was my last day there, so we went waveboarding, as well as the first day. I was better, I think I was really good. I fell only five hundred times... But Fina wanted the board, so we had to go to the house.

We voted on the Teen Choice Awards, watched some youtubers and some episodes of Gossip girl. Then I had to pack my bags and go to bed.
