

Stay at home by Alina Weisser

Something is different
But I don't understand what I look through the window up to the sky
The sun is still shining and I'm asking why

Something is different
Because I don't go to school
I work and learn from home isn't that cool?
Isn't that what every student was dreaming of?
My inner voice says no it's not

Something is different
Because I listen to different songs
And nothing feels wrong
But my heart is hurting
And I'm asking why
I don't know why but maybe I should call my grandma
And again I look up to the blue sky

Something is different
But I don't know what
I'm calling my grandma
But she doesn't pick up the phone
My heart hurts even more
I run to the car and I open the door

Something is different
Because the radio speaker talks about the virus
And after that he plays a song by Miley Cyrus
I turn the volume down
And press the gas pedal

Something is different
Because I see my Grandma in the ambulance
The doctor says she has to go to the hospital
There`s not much hope

Something is different
Because my grandpa has glassy eyes
He says his wonderful wife is going to paradise
But it`s not her fault she stayed at home

Something is different and I think I know why
My grandma passed away
I look in the doctor`s face and I`m asking him why
He answers because of the Coronavirus she went to the sky

My life is different now
And I know why
My grandma is gone

My life is different now
And this is why I`m asking you to stay home and to stay safe
Otherwise you and thousands of others will end up in the grave.

(not based on true events, so please do not worry)